I have thought of it since, and believe it to be true, though Conway is a healthy place. There is a deal of difference, she continued, in the sounding of the bell. My parents had the church before me; so I know all about these things. I had the place after my mother. Willing to turn her thoughts from anticipated deaths, we now inquire after the dead man, whose funeral bell is such a melancholy prognostic. He was Morris Evans, one of the singers here. I knew him well, she replied. When he was strong and came to church, his place was near the organ, amongst the singers. Come, I will mow it you. There, she said, this was his seat, close by the...
