This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Topic: Globalization, Political Economics, grade: 1,5, The Australian National University, 0 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: The east African country of Tanzania, once praised for its Open Door Policy and its committed support for refugees fleeing turmoil in their respective home countries, has shifted dramatically within the last two decades. This paper will investigate the changed policy of the Tanzanian government towards continuous refugee influx after its independence in 1964. It is apparent that perceptions of refugees have also shifted in local, regional and international arenas and due to the confines of this paper, developments on these fronts will only be mentioned peripherally. The refugee situation in the Great Lake Region of Tanzania is of exceptional importance for a selected number of reasons: 1) Tanzania has been host to the highest number of refugees on the African continent therefore putting a uncontested burden on the nation 2) The country acts as case for an increasing awareness of sovereignty, especially in...
