Apple Valley Press. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 112 pages. Dimensions: 8.1in. x 5.5in. x 0.5in. Warmhearted short fiction about both ordinary and out of the ordinary people. Examples: Young Witch Seeks True Love Brianna was not a very good witch. She had failed Spells 101 and she wasnt very good at Bi-location either. She could do a few tricks, but that didnt count for much. Even non-witches could sometimes do tricks. Her lack of skills was beginning to get her down. She wasnt bad looking for a witch. No obvious deformities that stood out. Certainly, no one would call her beautiful. Yet, there was definitely something you could see about her if you looked hard enough. Cuteness Yes, that was it. It appeared in her pert smile, which she was careful not to display too often. . . So what is so important you need to tell me right away Better sit down, Nick. Nicked rolled his eyes and took a seat. Nick, theres something about me that you should know. This is getting interesting. Really, Im serious. This is hard for me to say. The Mistake Already, it was getting dark. Opening the door she felt a cool breeze. She put her jacket on and set out. As she walked, the sky turned indigo, and the stars began to appear. First only the bright ones, and then gradually the night sky became filled with twinkling stars. So beautiful. She zipped her coat against the cold, and on the horizon of the distant hill the last vestiges of daylight gave way. Soon, it would be totally dark. A person appeared in the distance, a vague shape, nothing more. Whoever it was seemed to tarry, as if waiting for her. Not normally apprehensive, she wondered who it could be. A friend...
