Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: .each operation $A^{r(n-1)}$ can be expressed in terms of the above n operations of order 2. Those of the operations T, M, d, A, i, u therefore, which are distinct form an Abelian group of order 2, where n may be equal to, but cannot exceed n . This group is transformed into itself by the operation S , and therefore by an elementary theorem in group-theory, the order of the group generated by S and A is either $2n$ or $2n$ i. (Suppose now that A and S are any two operations of order 2 and 2^{-1} respectively of a doubly-transitive group of degree 2 and order $2(2^{-1})$. Then all the operations of the group of order 2 are included in the form SAS^r , and they are all permutable with each other. Hence, A and S must satisfy a relation of the form $A.S^{-1}AS=S^{-1}AS$ Now by the above theorem, A and S , when connected by this relation, generate a group of order $2(2^{1-1})$, where $-$ does not exceed n . If r_i is greater than $-i$, the group would contain more than $2m-1$ operations of order 2, which is impossible, since all the operations of order 2 are permutable among themselves. On the other hand r_i cannot be less than m , since the relation in question is a necessary one in order that A and S should generate the doubly-transitive group. Hence r_i must be equal to m , and the group is completely defined by the...
